

Allerton History Society

Welcome!

The Society was set up in 2003. It's pretty informal – there's no membership list and no joining fees!

We try and meet up a couple of times a year for evening talks of local historical interest and also arrange a summer visit.

The last two visits were to Glastonbury Abbey (see left) and to the Somerset Rural Life Museum.

These are always advertised beforehand in the Allerton News.

Information about previous talks and visits can be found on the Allerton Villages website: allertonvillages.co.uk

If you're interested in the history of the local area then do please come along to one of our meetings.

Currently we are undertaking a History of the Houses project, which is looking at the development of the villages, the architecture of individual old houses, and the people who lived in them.

If you would like to join in with this we would love you to do so. No previous historical knowledge is required.

The Society has produced a book entitled "Allerton in the 20th Century: from cowsheds to computers" which contains a lot of interesting information about the village. Copies are available from Johnny Torrens-Spence priced £6.
